JIM THORPE, INDIAN ATHLETE, SPEAKS TO BRISTOL ROTARIANS

Gives Experiences of His Career Covering Period of 23 Years

SOME GUEST COACHES

Says That Athletics Help Build Morale; Track A Great Developer

"Jim" Thorpe, world-renowned Indian athlete, was the guest speaker before the weekly meeting of Bristol Rotary Club at the Elks' Home yesterday afternoon, when he gave a sketch of his experiences as an athlete to the Rotarians, guests including high school coaches, captains and players, and visiting Rotarians. Approximately 60 persons were present.

Among the guests were Andrew Chamberlin and Arthur Driscoll, Fallston high school; Dick Mossbrook, "Jim" Patterson and coach George Reimer, Bensalem Twp. high school; "Chic" DiAngelo, "Bob" Monti, "Ben" Lupkin, Vincent Boccardo, Wendel Tazik and coach Thomas Campion, Bristol high school.

Thorpe, who was born in Italian territory (now Oklahoma) in 1888, began his athletic career at the age of 10 when he began playing football. Following his schooling on the Indian reservation he went to Haskell, Kansas, where he continued his athletic career. In 1904 he went to the Carlisle Indian school in Pennsylvania. In 1907 he was coached by the equally famous "Pop" Warner, and it was then that Thorpe began to gain fame for his prowess on the gridiron and track. His career extended over a period of 23 years. In 1912 he was a member of the U. S. Olympic Team.

Speaking of baseball Thorpe pointed out that this sport offers a fine vocation, beginning with active playing, coaching, managing and then umpiring.

"Track is the greatest body and health developer," the speaker declared. "It develops and teaches timing, co-ordination, and sight. With these, one has the requisites for all other athletic activities."

"But all kinds of athletics should be developed. They help to build morale."

Neppes Held Without Bail in Auto Death

PHILADELPHIA, June 13—Joseph Neppes, 22-year-old Bucks county farmhand, who was trapped as a hit-run driver by photographic negatives, was held without bail for the Grand Jury on charges of manslaughter by Magistrate William Hagan yesterday in the death of Morris Rothstein.

The magistrate also held Neppes, who lives near Lumberville, without bail on a burglary charge, in $2500 bail on a hit-run charge, in $2000 on an automobile theft charge, and fined him $10 for reckless driving. Asked if he had any statement, Neppes said, "There's nothing I can say except that the automobile (Rothstein's) didn't have its headlights turned on."

Rothstein, who was 50 and lived at 5821 Osage avenue, was killed in a crash at 39th and Spruce streets and was left lying in the street at 5 a. m. Wednesday. Less than eight hours later, the Accident Investigation Bureau had traced Neppes to the farm where he worked through film negatives found in his abandoned car.

Bucks County Man To Go To Chair Next Month

HARRISBURG, June 12—Governor Arthur H. James today fixed the week of July 28 for the execution of Harold Frisbie, 33-year-old Bucks County carpenter convicted of the hold-up slaying last October 17 of Edward Lee, 60, wealthy Sullivan County lumberman.

GREEK LAD COMPLETES 7 YEAR COURSE IN 4

Michael Contras, Quakertown, Is Very Happy To Be In America

TELLS OF JOURNEY

A young Greek boy, who in the past four years has completed the first seven grades of school in Milford Square, is pleased with his new life in America.

The lad, Michael Contras, son of A. Contras, Quakertown, first was a student of Mrs. Raymond Wileand, Milford Square. Unable to speak English, he entered the first grade, completing that and grade two in the months from January to June. He had previously attended school for two years in Cyprus. The following term he completed grades three and four, and was promoted to grammar school, where he was taught by Robert Reinhart; and was promoted each term thereafter. At the end of this term he was exempt from examinations, and was promoted to grade eight, he having attained the highest average in his class.

In the following paragraphs Michael tells of his journey from Cyprus, and his life in America:

"I was born in a little village called Geestisa on the island of Cyprus in the Mediterranean Sea.

"The climate is mild, somewhat like Florida.

"My father had been over here in America for eight years when he decided to bring mother and me over here, too.

"I was rather delighted at the idea of going to America, but still I felt sad to leave my home and friends in Cyprus. On the 27th of November, on a chilly night, we went on board a small mail steamer. On the morning of the 28th we started off but it was a sad departure. Almost everybody in the village was there to bid us good-bye. On the 30th of November, my mother and I reached Port Said, a small harbor on the Suez Canal facing the sea. We were delayed there for some time because we had to send back for our birth certificates. We stayed at a woman's boarding house.

"On a bright, clear afternoon we were taken to the docks and we boarded a steamer again. In four days we reached Marseilles, France. It was a very cold morning when the steamship company's agents came to take us to a hotel. We remained at the hotel the whole day and then at night the agents took us to the train terminal. There they put us aboard a train, and an agent with us. At six o'clock the next morning we pulled into Paris, France. It was very foggy in Paris.

"We stayed at a hotel for two days and two nights. At 10 o'clock in the morning we took a train for Hamburg, on the English Channel. At five o'clock in the afternoon we arrived at Hamburg. The authorities inspected us and at once they put us on a small boat to take us to the big steamer, the Aquatania. It took us six days and six nights to cross the ocean. The ocean trip was uneventful.

"When we arrived in New York the immigration authorities inspected us again. It was 12 o'clock when the steamer was tied to the docks, and the gangplank was lowered for the passengers to get off. We had to wait for about half an hour before my father showed up. I hardly knew him as I was only a few years old when he left Cyprus. My mother knew him right away when she saw him, and we heartily greeted each other.

"After our baggage was examined they let us go. We went to the bus terminal, and it was almost night when we arrived in Allentown. We took the trolley for Quakertown, and although I was sleeping most of the time, I managed to see some of the scenery. When we reached Quakertown my father's neighbor was there with his car to take us home to Milford Square. It was about 11 o'clock at night when we reached home, and we went to bed immediately. We arrived home on the 23rd of December, and had the first Christmas together in eight years.

"Although I felt sad when I left my old home in Cyprus, I am very glad that I am in America now, especially since I read in the papers what is happening in Cyprus during the war.

"I like my American home, my fellow pupils, my teachers, and am glad that I am an American."

Vessels Carrying Contraband To Be Sunk, Say Germans

Berlin, June 13—Any ship carrying contraband to England—whether its name be Robin Moor or anything else—will be sunk by German submarines, an official Wilhelmstrasse spokesman said today.

The spokesman did not formally acknowledge the charge made by the United States Government that a Nazi U-boat sank the Robin Moor in the South Atlantic.

His statement took this form: "The German Government will not be stampeded in the case of the Robin Moor. It will take its own time and investigate thoroughly before issuing any statement.

"But we are sinking, we have sunk and in the future we will sink every ship en route to England carrying contraband."

The German Government has repeatedly warned that American ships carrying war materials run the risk of being sunk by Nazi U-boats or surface raiders.

The Wilhelmstrasse brushed aside assertions that the Robin Moor carried no contraband as a "useless argument."

"Naturally," the spokesman said, "England is making the most out of claims that the ship was torpedoed without cause—an argument designated to agitate American minds."

Petrillo To Appeal

HARRISBURG, June 13—Herman Petrillo, sentenced to die in the chair for his part in the Philadelphia "murder for profit" ring, was scheduled today to appeal for commutation before the State Board of Pardons which convenes in Harrisburg June 19 and 20.

Petrillo, cousin of Paul Petrillo, executed leader of the conspiracy ring, will die June 30 unless his commutation appeal is granted by the board and unless Governor James intervenes.

Other applications, with date of sentence, included: Bucks County—George Bowen, 1937, robbery, being armed with an offensive weapon; Morris Frank, 1937, conspiracy.

BRISTOL P. O. S. OF A. TO TAKE PART IN PARADE

25th Annual Flag Day Program of Order Scheduled in Phila., Tomorrow

PROMINENT SPEAKERS

The Bristol lodge, Washington Camp, No. 789, will participate in the 25th annual Flag Day parade and program of the Patriotic Order Sons of America, in Philadelphia, tomorrow evening. The affair will be the 93rd annual Flag Day celebration of the order.

One of the speakers, the Rev. J. Franklin Duncombe, is a member of Camp 789. He joined the local group when he was serving as pastor of Bensalem Methodist Church.

The present Flag Day parades were organized by Charles H. Weisberger, founder of the Betsy Ross Flag Association, who was an ardent member of the P. O. S. of A. and Charles B. Helms, closing his 25th year as state secretary of this oldest patriotic society.

The parade will form at the North Plaza City hall, and march at eight o'clock, sharp, down Market to Fifth, Fifth to Arch to the Flag House where exercises will be held.

The Patriotic Order of Americans, the ladies auxiliary of the P. O. S. of A., the Loyal Orange Institution and the Commanderies, and other organizations join with the order each year. The Philadelphia Police-Fireman's Band leads the parade annually.

This year the parade brings with it special significance, due to the war conditions, and the fact that hundreds of the members are enlisted through the National Guards and the draft.

Some of the men in uniform are expected to join in the parade.

Members of the P. O. S. of A. will come 100 miles to unite with the Philadelphia members in this celebration.

The exercises at the Flag House will present Honorable L. Walter Edinger, state president of the Order, from Stroudsburg; Miss Eva Schreffler, state president of the P. O. of A., from Elizabethtown; the Rev. J. Franklin Duncombe, pastor of the Bala-Cynwyd Methodist Episcopal Church; and Philadelphia County president Harry C. Grafton. Chairman Helms will preside.

The drum and bugle units of Washington Camp, 345, Germantown, the Betsy Ross Drum and Bugle Corps, the two Colonial Color Guard troops, and several other musical units will participate.

Here and There in Bucks County Towns

County Agent William F. Greenawalt today announced the next meeting of the Bucks County Fruit Growers' Association will be held at the Ferndale Hotel, on Route 611, Tuesday evening, June 17th, at seven p. m. d. s. t.

The speaker will be Albert Cooper, of the extension department of State College, who will speak on the general subject of management of orchard soils, including fertility, cover crops, and contour planting.

Plans for a Summer tour, July 22nd, will also be discussed.

Dinner reservations should be made to Ralph T. Crowell, Buckingham, before Saturday, June 14th.

Three grandfather's clocks, the like of which cannot be found in another Pennsylvania high school, are included in the arts and crafts display being shown before the public this week as Sellersville - Perkaskie High School nears its Summer recess.

Robert E. Brown, supervisor of the crafts department at the school, commenting upon the unusual display of clocks, said: "You will find it hard to find a duplicate of one of these dandy, big timepieces." One is a huge model more than six feet high in the lovely Chippendale style prized so highly by antique collectors. Its graceful decorations and finely chiselled woodwork is reminiscent of the days of 1750 on up to the Civil War.

David Cole, Weisler, made the three grandfather's clocks. It is said the thing that makes the finest one unique is that it is from an exceptionally rare model, coming from an old Philadelphia family.

At the June meeting of the Auxiliary of the Albert R. Atkinson, Jr., Post, No. 210, American Legion, the annual election of officers was held on Tuesday when Mrs. William May was re-elected president at Doylestown.

Mrs. May was elected a delegate to attend the convention to be held in August at Altoona. The Montgomery-Bucks Bi-County Council meeting will be held Thursday, June 19th, at Norristown.

THE GREAT GAME OF POLITICS

By FRANK R. KENT
(Distributed by McNaught Syndicate, Inc.)

The Answer is "No"

Washington, June 12. ARE we doing everything possible to put our country in the best defensive position at the earliest possible time? Are we giving to Britain the sort of all-out aid which the President promised? In view of the unlimited emergency proclamation, those questions are certainly pertinent and proper.

THE answer to each is an unequivocal and indisputable "no." Hardly anyone will contend otherwise. It is probable the President himself would not do so, because, of course, no one is in position to know the facts as well as he. The truth is that we not only are not doing all that is possible, but we are coming nowhere near doing so. True, one hundred per cent is far too much to expect, but to fall as far short as we are falling is without excuse.

EVIDENCE of it is on every side. It is a matter of common knowledge. It is to be found in the 2,000,000 and more man-days lost in strikes and in the sixty and more strikes still in progress on army and navy work. It is to be found in the shocking waste involved in the construction of the camps. It is to be found in the refusal to adopt the only feasible way by which prices can be controlled. It is to be found in the failure to evolve a sound taxation program or to prevent non-defense governmental expenditures from inexorably rising.

PARTICULARLY, it is to be found in the headless defense organization, which, through lack of judgment and experience, is making some pretty costly blunders. An example is the recent proposal of the OPM to increase the steel production of the country by ten million

"DREAMS AND HUNCHES" EXCHANGE CLUB SUBJECT

INTERESTING DISCOURSE

The Bristol Exchange Club met last evening with 30 members present, also one guest, the Rev. James J. Bingham, a former member now residing in Philadelphia. Horace Schmidt presided.

The speaker was the Rev. A. L. Murray, Lansdale. The subject of Rev. Murray was "Dreams and Hunches." "Hunches," said Rev. Murray, "have been a subject of study by me for several years. 'In the Near East during the course of my travels through Palestine, Syria, Iraq and Arabia I was especially impressed by the importance of hunches to the people. The Eastern mind does not follow the logic of the Western mind in its trend of thought and explanation of nature's phenomena. The Arabian does not try to explain through a logical process of reasoning. It accepts events as the will of Allah.

"Many great individuals have been guided by hunches. Jay Cook as a bank teller could always spot a counterfeit bill but couldn't tell why. The explanation of hunches is that the eye sees more than is registered on the conscious mind, and the ear hears more than is registered on the conscious mind. Therefore the unconscious mind has many things registered which later find an outlet. When the unconscious mind acts, therefore, we have no logical explanation and are guided by hunches.

"We should act on these hunches because they are of value. 'Dreams,' the Rev. Murray explained, 'are really experiences of life. We force many things we wish to forget or suppress upon the subconscious mind. These things or thoughts we do not wish to let out, but the subconscious mind must find an outlet and it does when we dream. These suppressed thoughts come out in disguise, and take on what appears to be difficult of explanation. But the subconscious mind is only trying to find that release which we sometimes dare not or will not allow the conscious mind to express.

"We can make dreams of value by forcing on the subconscious mind those things we wish to remember and which are of value. Put the mind to work.

"Follow your hunches and dreams; plant in the mind creative thoughts early in the morning or late at night when sleep is difficult to attain. Sleeping or drowsiness can be of great value. Edison got many ideas in this twilight state of the mind.

55 Enjoy Addresses And Dancing at Banquet Here

The 55 places arranged for the 4th annual banquet of Women of the Moose, Chapter 763, in the Moose lodge home last evening, were occupied by members of that chapter, men affiliated with Bucks Lodge, No. 1169, L. O. O. M. and friends.

The guest speakers were Mrs. Mary Hooper, Baltimore, Md.; Miss Jane Debus, Columbia, who instituted Bristol chapter four years ago; and Miss Helen Bair, Lancaster.

Mrs. Hooper, who spoke in the absence of Miss Katherine Smith, grand recorded of the Women of the Moose Chapters, told of the work at Mooseheart and Moosehaven, especially in relation to present-day conditions.

Miss Debus in referring to Bristol Chapter asked for constant growth of the organizations; and greetings were brought by Miss Bair.

Mrs. Robert Bleakney, toastmaster, introduced the guests. Following the singing of "America" by the assemblage; Mrs. Timothy Reardon asked the blessing. The menu consisted of: Fruit cup, roast turkey, gravy, mashed potatoes, peas, celery, olives, cranberry sauce, rolls, coffee, ice cream. Decorations were in the chapter colors of purple and gold. Dancing concluded the evening's pleasure.

POLICE OF FOUR BOROUGH IN BUCKS TO BE CIVIL SERVICE

New Legislation To Become Effective in State On July 1st

MUST PASS TESTS

Applicants Hereafter Will Be Subject To An Examination

Police officers in boroughs and townships having three or more officers on July 1st will come under civil service law in accordance with a bill passed by the Legislature and signed a few days ago by Governor Arthur H. James. The boroughs affected in Bucks county are Bristol, Morrisville, Doylestown and Quakertown.

The bill was sponsored by the Pennsylvania State Chiefs of Police Association, and Bucks County Detective Anthony Russo was a member of the committee. He witnessed the signing of the bill by the Governor.

Briefly, the bill provides for a commission of three, consisting of one physician and two laymen to be named by borough councils. Those appointed must not hold any political office of the local, State or Federal government, except one who may be a councilman or commissioner. These are to be named within 30 days and serve without pay. This commission will then make the rules, regulations and qualifications for those holding positions as police officers. All vacancies are to be advertised and the names of applicants posted in a conspicuous place. Then the examinations are held and the results thereof are also to be posted and the individual getting the highest average is to be chosen for the position. War veterans will be given a certain number of points advantage.

The commissions have ten days in which to organize, then they must draw up rules and regulations approved by the council or township commission. Tests containing "practical" questions are to be framed by the commissions, and two weeks before examinations, notice must be published in a newspaper of general circulation in the community.

To take the written examinations, applicants first must pass physical tests. The commission certifies a list of eligibles from the examination results. Appointments must then be made by the council or commission from the three top-ranking candidates.

New appointees go on a six-months probationary period before they come under the civil service provisions against removal for any but these causes:

(1) Physical or mental disability, which would relieve them of duty with an honorable discharge; (2) neglect or violation of any official duty; (3) violation of any law, which is classed as a misdemeanor or felony; (4) inefficiency, neglect, incompetence, disobedience of orders or conduct unbecoming an officer; (5) intoxication while on duty; (6) engaging or participating in the conducting of any political or election campaign other than the exercise of right of suffrage.

Removal for religious, racial or political reasons is specifically prohibited by the law, which was signed last week by Governor James.

Present members of the force would not be required to take the tests, according to the bill's "hereafter" provision.

Non-competitive examinations are to be given to appointees to the chief's test, or to emergency appointments. In the latter case, however, competitive examinations follow within three weeks.

Temporary appointments in case of riots, tumults, war, pestilence, conflagrations or public celebrations, likewise are exempt from the civil service tests.

If a person is discharged he is given notice and the reasons set forth at least ten days before the date set for the hearing. If he is not satisfied with the verdict he can appeal to the court. The bill has no provisions for hours or for wages.

Borough council names one application to fill a vacancy for the office of chief of police and then he is given an examination. If he makes the passing average he is appointed. But he does not have to take a competitive examination.

FOR LESS VERBAL SHOOTING

In Lakeville, Connecticut, where he is at work on another novel, Sinclair Lewis was quizzed by a reporter on his international views. The author said he is for peace and against convulsions, but does not intend to get involved further in the nationwide debate on America's part in the war. Said he:

"For many and varied reasons I am against convulsions and against our going to war. If I tried to explain that I would have to write either a short statement, which would be misunderstood, or a long statement, which would take too much time and would not convince anybody, anyway."

"To go into my historical and philosophical reasons is like getting into one of those discussions that start at 8 p. m. and wind up at 4 a. m., with the participants further apart than ever. I certainly am not going to write a 300,000-word book about it."

There is something undeniably refreshing about Mr. Lewis' refusal to elaborate his convictions on this highly controversial matter. In the hot air welter of unimportant individual opinions offered without much solicitation on street corners, in parlors, under the roofs of legislative chambers and from the writer's desk, his attitude is a welcome blast of fresh air.

The American people want and expect to hear the opinions of persons qualified by knowledge and practical experience to discuss international affairs. But they have been surfeited during the crisis with the less valid opinions of other persons whose chief motivation to speak has been the well-known love of the sound of their own voices.

Mr. Lewis' willingness to let his thought stand, without further discussion to justify his stand and bring others to his way of thinking, relieves the pressure on the ear drums.

FUTURE SOLVENCY

Dr. Joseph A. Brandt, who is soon to become president of the University of Oklahoma, believes the present war may last ten years and urgently advises Oklahoma to take steps to insure economic soundness and solvency when peace comes.

Some may become mesmerized by the magnificent outlook of defense industry, says Doctor Brandt, but the country cannot afford to be deceived as to its permanence. Oklahoma should not be just another state with its hand out beckoning to eastern capital to come to the rescue.

Oklahoma ships its oil, coal, and zinc to other states and lets those states earn the money that ought to be kept at home. Oklahoma then buys the finished products back from her raw materials. That is colonial economy, he asserted, and he questioned whether Oklahoma wants to be an American colony forever.

The incoming university president is a powerful pleader for Oklahoma's future. And his arguments apply to many other states with equal force.

Eating the things people ate hundreds of years ago will promote good teeth, according to dentists. It would be rather difficult, though, to get a leg o' dinosaur into a modern refrigerator.

CHAPTER SEVENTEEN

Although it was late when the Baroness left Northheim's rooms, Marie did not ask her to stay for dinner. They had cocktails on what Marie called "the back porch."

Tony found himself again drawn toward this tragic woman. What had she and Northheim said? The Baroness gave no hint. She sat on the wicker lounge, between Tony and Ray Sheldon. Glancing up, Tony found Marie looking at him with a puzzled expression, and he realized with a start that his own manner toward La Lascar was markedly warm. Nino Lippi, beside Marie, was also watching him.

Eve Pryne was none too cordial toward a woman she hoped Marie would not invite as another guest. At last Eve rose with unwelcome energy from her chair, her eyes the very naive blue which permitted her so many indiscretions. "Well, I, for one, am going to dress," she said. "Will you excuse me, Baroness?"

After that, Madame Lascar took her leave beautifully. Tony went with her. He offered the excuse of seeing her back to her hotel.

"Do go," Marie said. "We won't wait dinner. Do you mind?"

Once in the launch, Madame Lascar sat narrow and quiet, opposing Tony's efforts to draw her out. But as he walked with her to the Hotel d'Angleterre, her slender hand caught at his sleeve. "Do not stay on the yacht," she whispered.

"Why?" He halted.

Her hand fell away. Her fine eyes seemed to take pleasure in the mountainous island at this twilight hour. "Corfu is so enchantingly of the past," she said. "One is so confined on a yacht. And Cannes—well, the Riviera—you know it."

"I know what it used to be," he said. And they spoke no more.

Tony saw her into the elevator, and hurried to the desk, hardly hoping for an answer to his cable to Ed Keeler. But there was one. It said, "YOUR FIRST CABLE NOT RECEIVED. GREEN LIGHTS."

That meant to go ahead, of course. So Hoto had not sent that deliberately misleading wire from the Serena. Therefore, from the moment they left Corfu, he would be cut off from all communication with New York.

Tony felt unspeakably depressed. They were not yet at dinner when he returned to the yacht. Marie met him, as he took the stairs to his stateroom. She had changed into something silky and of the dark blue she seemed to like best.

"I've told Captain Buckner I want to start for Cannes at once," she said. "Do you still want to come along?"

"May I?" Tony countered.

"If you want to," she said carelessly, and ran up the stairs.

The Serena was on her smooth course to Cannes. The island of Corfu was a dream left behind. They rounded the toe of Italy's boot, passed through the Straits of Messina, and were in the Tyrrhenian Sea. The sense of strain on board should have been lessened. But it hadn't; it increased instead.

Northheim felt uneasy, after his talk with the Baroness Lascar. He took his temper out on Nino, whose romantic heart revolted at making love to Marie under pressure.

Much of Major Eric Thelme's blustering heartiness had subsided. He liked Anthony Worth and loved Marie Schuyler as a big, shaggy dog loves someone kind; and he knew that harm threatened both these young people. But his terror of what Northheim could do to him, outweighed his sympathies. He wished Northheim had never spotted him that time in Monte when he went broke. He had been calling himself Lord Hurlerth then.

Tony was moody. He had made no headway. The golden Riviera of casinos and intrigue, promised developments he couldn't foresee. How could he, before then, uncover the dark play on the yacht? How was it possible, he thought despairingly, to risk any bold move on this boat, with Marie at stake?

He wished he could be franker with Ray Sheldon. But Ray couldn't keep anything to himself. He was like some small, sprightly retriever, trotting about picking things up. And he was over-friendly with Fritz, the steward. Tony had caught them whispering together.

Marie Schuyler felt glad that the cruise, upon which she had so casually embarked, would soon be over. Tony piqued her; Nino aroused conflicting emotions, and she was beginning to resent Felix Northheim's pervading authority on her yacht. Her state of mind was, therefore, unsettled when, on Thursday morning, she stroled into Mrs. Pryne's cabin adjoining her own.

Eve was manhandling her nails, sitting propped among pillows, a pink silk spread harmonizing with her pink and white make-up. "Are you going to marry the Marchese, darling?" she languidly asked. "You can't keep him dangling forever. He's been quite squirming since that good-looking Worth boy turned up. I wonder," she chattered on, "if that dear old guardian of yours had anything to do with this Tony being in Corfu. It does seem rather funny, doesn't it?"

"Tony isn't a snoop," Marie said, haughtily, wandering over to Eve's dresser. She unstopped one of the many flasks of perfume arrayed there, and wrinkled her nose over it. She set it down. "I think I'd like Tony better if he loosened up a little more," she complained. "He's so sort of glum all the time."

"You mean he doesn't make love to you," Eve applied a light polish to her thumbnail. "I asked you if you were going to marry Nino. You know, my dear, you do come into your own in two months. You're nearly twenty-one and you're still a problem child. You don't mind my saying that? Judge Fairchild definitely feels you shouldn't marry a foreigner. He once told me," she added, "that he thought American money should stay in America, especially with everything so muddled abroad. I see what he means."

Marie's dark blue eyes flashed. She seized a comb and drew it impatiently through the deep red of her hair that curled outward along her shoulders. "I'd marry Lippi tomorrow if I were sure I'd never want to divorce him," she said.

But later, when Marie went up on deck, the future seemed much less important than the present. It was a heavenly day. Nino Lippi waited for her. He was in high spirits this morning, perhaps because he hadn't been summoned by Northheim for one of the talks that took all romance out of his amorous soul.

He took Marie's hand and led her, unprotesting, to the farthest end of the bow. They stood silent a moment, watching the glitter of foam parting as the ship drove ahead. A wind had come up, tossing spume over the rails.

Marie laughed with the sheer joy of living, her hair fanning out around her gay, vivid face. It was such a clean, blue world. She and Nino shone in it, their bright heads close together, their arms linked.

"My darling, my beautiful darling—carissima to tanto—I love you, love you," he said at last in a low voice.

"Do you, Nino?" She turned to look up at him. He was very sweet. "I cannot bear waiting any longer," he said, passionately. "I am tormented. I do not sleep. All the time I think of you, my little love. Will you not make me the happiest of men? Will you not marry me?"

Marie's gaze widened on him with questions of a lifetime. Out in the fine air of the June day everything seemed perfect. There wasn't a cloud; only the voice of Nino—ardent, persuasive, in her ear. "Why, I—," she began.

Captain Buckner looked bleakly down from his bridge at the two slender figures in the bow. No mistake about what was going on. He growled to his officers, Middleton and Swan, with a seaworthy oath, "If that lass were my young 'un, I'd take her over my knee!"

Swan sighed. He was quite young, with a gentle brown eye. He had a girl in New York he hoped to marry some day. He wrote her every Saturday night, and sometimes sent her bits of poetry. But the brittle Middleton, a confirmed bachelor, agreed with the captain.

Tony, with creased brow, had watched Marie and Nino walk off toward the bow. They were absorbed in each other; any intrusion there would have made him more unpopular. Marie had been distinctly on the cool side since he had escorted La Lascar back to shore.

Worth was scowling after them when Ray Sheldon grabbed him. It was early for Ray to be up and around, suggesting a turn about deck. He was bristling with mystery and importance as he backed Tony to the rail.

"Now, my lad, out with it!" Worth said, good-naturedly.

They had come to a halt opposite the port windows of Northheim's suite which formed the end of the main deck's aft units. Ray's pointed little ears twitched, and he was shaken by a gale of silent laughter as he looked at the closed windows.

"Pretty snug in there, isn't he?" Tony nodded, and glanced across the deck. With a sense of almost physical impact, he saw Felix Northheim's distorted face flattened against a window pane. Then the ugly mask vanished.

"I don't like this spot," Tony said sourly. "Let's move."

Ray screwed up his sharp little nose. "There's more than meets the eyes in there," he whispered, grinning at Tony's disgusted expression. "I say the man's making a fortune in juggling munitions. I'm going to find out."

Tony walked away. But he didn't walk far. He waited for the little man to catch up, and then brusquely demanded, "What do you mean you're going to find out?"

"I don't think I'd better tell you, N. I really don't think I should," Ray said. There were treacherous lines about his bright eyes in the sunlight. "If I get anything, it's got to be a scoop—a big one!"

He looked at Tony, and for a moment he didn't seem so assured. "You see I write articles—special correspondence for the newspapers and so on. I often mail in tid-bits—I don't mean malicious gossip," he added with a strange—on him—earnestness. "Just slants on news and personalities, you know; human interest items with a dash of paprika to give them zest. No byline stuff as yet; I don't sign my own name."

He looked down at the deck and up into Tony's gray eyes. "It's my mother," Ray said, with a wry twist of his eyebrow. "My mother thinks writers—that is, journalists—are awfully low. She wants to support me, and of course I won't have it. So—" His small hands waved vaguely toward the sea, as if blessing the miles of it between him and his parent. "So I have a knack of scribbling, and oh well, on fait ce qu'on peut, meaning one does what one can."

"I'd like to read something of yours," Tony said warmly, liking Ray and distrusting his discretion more than ever. Then it came over him what all this talk had been about. "Listen, you're not thinking of Northheim as a scoop?"

Tony was genuinely alarmed now. When Ray's nerves were wound up, he could be foolhardy. "Leave him alone!" Tony's voice was stern. "For heaven's sake, man, don't meddle with Northheim!"

Ray nodded with canny satisfaction. "I thought so. Afraid I'll put one over on you?"

"It isn't that," Tony began, and checked himself. Official or unofficial, his tongue was honor bound. No one connected with such a mission as his talked.

Ray was staring beyond him. Marie and Nino Lippi were coming along the deck. They walked hand-in-hand, graceful, light of foot. Marie saw Ray and Tony. "I'm engaged!" she cried. "I'm actually engaged. Isn't it wonderful?"

The Great Game of Politics

tons. Instead of accelerating our defense effort, that will retard it. At least, such is the view of experienced and disinterested men informed as to the situation.

THE chief point they make is that, while it is true there is not enough steel for both defense purposes and civilian wants, there is ample steel for war purposes and civilian necessities. They sharply distinguish between what civilian business would like to have and what it can get along with. There is need for more steel, they contend, if we are going to operate on the "business as usual" plan, but if we are going to measure up to the unlimited-emergency proclamation, then business as usual becomes absurd and there is no excuse for it.

REPORTS to the President by Mr. Gano Dunn, special consultant, show that the grand total of army, navy, maritime and other military requirements, plus all aid to the British, will require less than twenty-five per cent of our existing steel capacity. Hence, the new expansion must be designed primarily for civilian rather than defense purposes. It is suggested that the whole steel problem can be solved by curtailing the production of non-war material and giving the defense program right of way, and that the best place to curtail is in automobile production. Approximately eleven million tons of ingot steel were used in automobile construction last year. If this were cut fifty per cent, it would not materially affect the public, as there are millions of good second-hand cars available, and it would release the automobile plants for needed defense work.

CLEARLY, this curtailment would obviate the necessity for more steel. The trouble is that, while the Administration has said that "business as usual" must be abandoned, it has done nothing to put that idea into effect except talk. No one in the defense organization cares about exercising the power or taking the responsibility for ordering a fifty per cent reduction in an industry as great as the automobile industry. Instead, they propose to let "business as usual" continue by ordering an expansion of 10,000,000 tons of steel, although the reasons that make this course a detriment to the defense program have been laid before them.

A FEW of these reasons can be listed:

1. It could not be effective before two and a half years, by which time, probably, the increased production would be a liability rather than an asset;
2. it would cost about $1,250,000,000;
3. it would require about 4,250,000 tons of steel for construction, which steel would build a thousand of the ships so urgently needed now;
4. it would require a vast army of toolmakers, machinists, boiler-makers and mechanics of all kinds, all of whom are required in the defense work;
5. if necessary after the war, which is doubtful, this steel expansion could be done cheaper and better and would create a cushion for post-war unemployment;
6. it would require the employment of a large number of skilled workmen, who simply are not available at present taken off defense jobs.

THESE are some of the points made against the proposed steel expansion program. There are others, but these would appear enough to establish the fact that the idea has not been well conceived and that the consequences of the expansion have not been understood. They would also seem to justify the assertion that the defense organization is still operating on the theory that "business as usual" is not incompatible with the "unlimited emergency." Until that idea is abandoned, the answer to the two questions asked at the beginning of this column will continue emphatically to be "No."

Lemon Adds to the Bide

By BETTY BRADLEY

M EALS well-cooked and attractively served help to keep the fires of romance burning as many wives know. Some women are born cooks, others acquire the art. But every model homemaker is on the look-out for aids to help her provide the meals in a simple yet effective manner which will please the "man of the house."

There's hardly a dish that lemons won't improve. They bring out the flavor of so many foods that they go right through the courses of a meal adding distinction each step of the way. Men thoroughly enjoy salads when fresh lemon juice is added to the dressing to bring out a fragrant tang and tempting flavor.

Lemon Mayonnaise

This dressing is just the thing for all salads — especially the orange salad pictured on side. Combine 1 egg, ¼ cup fresh lemon juice, 1 teaspoon mustard, 1 teaspoon salt, 1 tablespoon sugar, and a dash of pepper or paprika. Then beat 1 pint salad oil in slowly, using a whirl type beater. Continue beating until dressing is thick. Makes 2½ cups.

Gay Lemon Garnishes

The brightness of a lemon garnish makes a picture he will want you to repeat. Thin slices of colorful lemon may be easily cut with the scissors. Squeezable quarters have a definite place on the menu for they bring out a garden fresh flavor in vegetables and enhance the taste of fish and meat. For juicy quarters, cut the lemon lengthwise in four pieces with a sharp knife. Here we view a lemon ring garnishing a bundle of asparagus and an attractively cut lemon slice on the broiled salmon.

Magic Never-Fail Lemon Pie

Always popular with men and an aid indeed to the bride is this never-fail lemon pie made without cooking. Filling: Stir together 1½ cups sweetened condensed (not evaporated) milk, ½ cup fresh lemon juice, grated peel of 1 lemon, and 2 beaten egg yolks. (Filling will thicken as though cooked.) Pour into: Pie Shell: Stand a row of lemon wafers around edge of an 8-inch pie plate. Fill spaces between wafers and cover bottom of plate with ¾ cup wafer crumbs, rolled fine and mixed with ¼ cup melted butter. Top with meringue made by beating 2 egg whites and ¼ cup sugar until stiff. Brown in oven.

Faith Clarke's SHOPPING TIPS FOR BUDGETEERS

We all wish to buy wedding gifts which brides will not feel inclined to return. Furthermore, we want the best our money can buy. Let me make some practical, your-money's-worth suggestions.

If you are in the family, what could be better than a work-saver gift for the new bride? What about a washer of washers—the new "Laundromat" by Westinghouse? With it a bride will not have to even wet her fair hands. The "Laundromat" both washes and proceeds to rinse (3 times!) without more than the initial attention. Washes everything, from wispy silks to grubby overalls. Portable. No special plumbing, vibration free, no anchoring. Install in kitchen, bathroom, basement, anywhere! Fine for apartments. Good looking. She'll love it! Very convenient terms at Snellenburgs. Price, $194.50.

Ever use an automatic ironer—speaking of practical wedding gifts from the family? A bride will overwhelm you with gratitude for the "Speed Queen" ironer. A bride and a "Speed Queen" will have a grand time together. I promise you! Just now the ironer (including a fine metal table for holding or tucking the ironer away) can be had, at Snellenburgs, at a reduced price of $32.98 instead of $47.48. This ironer is fully enclosed, with permanent lubrication, has thermostat heat control. It's easy to learn to "Speed Queen" iron his shirts! Easiest Snellenburg terms.

Those of us who figure on making five dollar wedding gifts will do well at Snellenburgs' Glass Dept. (3rd fl.), especially liked—for wedding gift—a buffet or table set of exquisite flowers and matching candlesticks. The pattern, "First Love," by Duncan Miller, is etched upon clear glass and is delicately charming. The bowl may be used for flowers, fruits, or even salads. It is a generous 12 inches, gracefully flared and with an irregular edge. Each rhythmic candlestick holds two lights. Price, $4.98.

Very delightful, too, is the "First Love" pattern in flat silver, at Snellenburgs. Do see it. A service of six can be had for $29.75. Pieces are triple plate overlaid at the wearing points, and have a lifetime guarantee. Besides, the pattern is adorable. Remarkable values nearby are the Malibu, Rio, and Vista patterns, actually 144 pieces for $29.95! My choice is Rio. Before gifting, promise me you'll visit the department. You'll be glad!

I wish I had room to tell you about more of the delightful gifts in this shop of good will and grand values. Be sure to mention our column—yours and mine—to the shop. Atta girls! "F. C."

If you are a prospective bride, or know one who is about to throw a real wedding, you should be interested in the bridesmaid pearl necklaces in Snellenburg's Pearl Corner near 11th and Market. Lovely bridesmaid strings with new filigree gold clasps can be had for $1 to $5. For the bride herself the groom should provide a precious string of cultured pearls. Snellenburg's unusual Pearl Corner has a most impressive collection of cultured pearls at from $7.50 to $50 a string, including secure, solid gold clasps. Seeing is believing!

This season's hand forged aluminum is rivaling silver for wedding gifts. It has a modern trend, the young set likes in its homes. Yet this particularly striking version of the ware in Snellenburg's 1st fl. Silver Dept. suggests, at the same time, a soft, traditional grace. Never has aluminum achieved such beauty. Snellenburg's ware is satisfyingly heavy and in great variety. Floral and leaf motifs are profusely used, and all modeling lacks stiffness. Stainproof. Gorgeous salad bowl, $2.95. Stunning trays at $2.79 up to $4.95, etc. Things look three times the price!

Buying the bride her first dishes? I suggest you take her to see the new "platinum" and white set which the younger set declares is "tops." A Snellenburg platinum pattern service for twelve, 94 pieces, is priced at $39.50. This finer yet economical pottery is a formidable rival to china. The "platinum" decorations—in this case a multiple band and plated knobs on some dishes—are simply stunning for any formal occasion. They also add cheer in a less formal setting, because of their great reflection of light. Well modeled shapes. Don't dare buy elsewhere before seeing them.

Keep a bride and groom singing or at least one of them playing a soothing melody, and you go far to establish marital harmony. So why not a piano—familiar? You can buy the young folks a real "Ludwig" spinet model at Snellenburgs, and on terms which beautifully accommodate themselves to parental purses. See the charming Louis XV Ludwig model in walnut at the very good price of $285. Ludwig pianos are a Philadelphia standby and are now to be had in Snellenburg's 5th fl. Piano Dept. exclusively.

their basis consists of left-over meat, ground, moistened with left-over gravy and placed in rounds of baking-powder biscuit dough, and there's nothing new about the ingredients, in this way they are interestingly presented for your family's enjoyment.

Fried Meat Pies

2 cups ground cooked meat
1 cup thick gravy (or white sauce)
Salt and pepper
Baking powder biscuit dough
Lard for deep-fat frying
Combine ground meat with gravy or white sauce to make a stiff paste. Season to taste. Make baking powder dough. Roll to one-fourth inch thickness and cut into rounds. Place a teaspoonful of meat paste in the center of one round and cover with another, pressing the edges together to seal. Drop into a kettle of deep hot lard at 375 degrees F. and fry until brown, about 3 or 4 minutes. Serve at once. Tomato sauce may be served with these meat pies.

Sirloin Lamb Chops Give Menu Refreshing Distinction

Piping hot lamb chops, becomingly browned, give both a lift and a lift to spring menus.

Sirloin chops are prepared as any other lamb chops, by broiling or pan broiling, according to Inez S. Willson, home economist. To panbroil put the chops in a frying pan, preheated or not as you prefer; brown on both sides, then reduce the heat and cook slowly until done.

Broil Chops Slowly

To broil the lamb chops, put them on a broiler rack and adjust so that if they are about one inch thick the top of the meat is about two inches from the source of heat and about two inches thick, about three inches. If your broiler won't permit this much space, reduce the heat to moderate temperature.

Broil until the top side is nicely browned, then season with salt and pepper, turn and continue broiling until second side is browned, then season it. Only one turning is necessary when the chops are broiled slowly in this manner.

The broiling time depends on the thickness of the meat and the degree of doneness desired. Chops one inch thick require about 12 minutes for broiling. Lamb chops are not served rare.

Don't make just a pretense of serving lamb hot; serve it as hot as you possibly can.

The flavor of lamb, distinctive in itself, blends well with most vegetables and other foods. That is why a meal based on lamb offers infinite variety to the menu. You'll find its distinction refreshing when you're anxious to serve something that's just a little bit out of the ordinary fare.

democratic way of life was worth fighting for, and that freedom must not be taken for granted, she urged the women to band together on a non-political basis and become informed on subjects pertaining to defense. The following subjects and their relationships to defense were suggested: taxation, civil liberties, inter-American co-operation, better housing, relief and collective bargaining. "Our targets for fighting should include those against confusion, defeatism, class hatred and foreign isms."

Mrs. Robert P. Hoyt, New York City, was the second speaker of the afternoon. Mrs. Hoyt has Bucks county ancestry but has lived most of her life in Latin and South America. She learned three foreign languages before speaking English, and is now a member of the Pan-American Committee of National Conference in Cause and Cure of War.

Mrs. Hoyt, having lived intimately with the women in Latin America, spoke with interest on their type of life. "There is a minority of the modern or progressive type. Some women in this group are active in governmental affairs. The largest group consists of the colonials, or ones living at a lower tempo, and which group also includes the illiterates. These are all home-loving people. The third group is the Indian who lives in complete isolation."

"Latin America is made up of 20 so-called republics. The governments are striving for social betterment; they are becoming more internationally minded and have a higher regard for the United States. They are also enforcing more anti-alien laws. In Brazil, where 60 per cent of the coffee is exported to the U. S., no American is permitted to be a coffee broker," There are many restrictions on foreigners who wish to settle in Latin America, but Mrs. Hoyt urged us to understand and even welcome the differences between our countries.

At the conclusion of the meeting refreshments were served in the garden. Mrs. Field has been in Bucks county for a week. She held organization meetings in Riegelsville, Churchville, and Bristol. Her hostesses while here were Mrs. C. A. G. Pease, Quakertown; Mrs. J. Marvin Shicks, Riegelsville; and

Mrs. John Deland, Buckingham; Mrs. Alexander Fleisher, Churchville; and Mrs. Hugh B. Eastburn, Bristol.

ON THE SCREENS

BRISTOL THEATRE

It's a real he-man, Western spectacle, loaded with suspense and something new in romance that opens today at the Bristol Theatre. Aptly titled

"The Round Up," Paramount brings its tops in outdoor melodrama to the screen with a cast and story that will thrill the moviegoer. Indian uprisings, bandit gun-runners, steers, horses, western music, and breath-taking views of a newly discovered section of the High Sierras, are only a part of the film's colorful pageantry.

One of Hollywood's most popular stars, Jack Holt returns to the Bristol Theatre screen in what is certain to be one of his most-talked-of action hits, "The Great Swindle."

RITZ THEATRE

Hollywood's new system of grooming its young players before presenting them before audiences presents its Exhibit A in the person of Kathryn Grayson, who makes her screen debut in "Andy Hardy's Private Secretary," coming to the Ritz Theatre today for an engagement of two days.

Petite Miss Grayson, possessor of an amazing coloratura voice, was discovered some 18 months ago when she appeared at a Hollywood musicale. Louis B. Mayer was among the guests and signed her as a player.

GRAND THEATRE

Long before Deanna Durbin achieved her present record of eight straight hits, questions about the quality of the star's films were abandoned.

The only argument which remains is "which one was the best?" A likely choice for the answer to that query was found yesterday at the Grand Theatre, when "Nice Girl?," Deanna's ninth picture, opened its current run. Easily Miss Durbin's most mature vehicle, and one of her most entertaining, the new picture has moments of romance, hilarity and music as moving as any in all her eight previous successes.

MORRISVILLE

A barbecue supper took place on the lawn of the home of Mr. and Mrs. F. Watts, last evening. Attendants were members of Young People's Fellowship of the Church of the Incarnation.

Mrs. H. Stanford Speechely and Mrs. Joseph Rappert gave a variety shower at the home of the former in honor of Miss Marjorie Wallis whose wedding takes place this week. Other guests included: Mrs. Joseph Heenan, Wallingford, Vt. Other guests were: Mrs. Frank Erbe, Mrs. Peg Wallis, Mrs. William Young, Mrs. L. Jerome and Mrs. Clifford Severns.

Wallis, Mrs. Francis G. Cart, Mrs. Willis

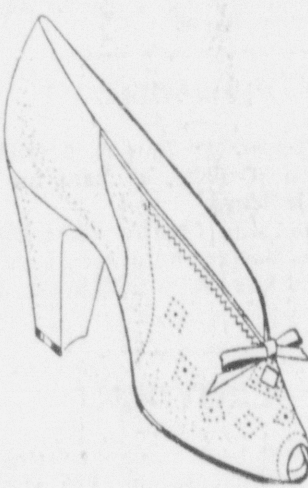

Tantum, Mrs. John Margerum, Mrs. Szolomayer and Miss Helen Szolomayer were guests of friends last Cichon, Miss Lucille Margerum and Miss Reba Margerum.

Mr. and Mrs. Frank D. Lorimer gave a farewell party in honor of Mr. and Mrs. J. Gordon White, who have left town to occupy their summer home at Wallingford, Vt. Other guests were: Mr. and Mrs. Henry O'Reilly and Mr. and Mrs. Clifford Severns.

Miss Helen Krysa, Miss Marjorie

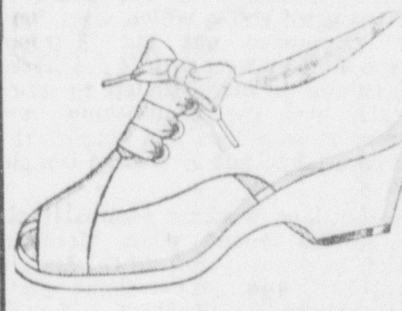

Mrs. Clifford G. Pollock entertained at her home at a covered dish luncheon and musicale to benefit the Clara Burgess Guild of the First Presbyterian Church. Mrs. Thomas Rogers assisted as hostess.

Mrs. M. G. Gwynne entertained at dinner for Dr. and Mrs. Alfred Hand, Philadelphia.

LEINHEISER LOSES CHANCE TO TWIRL A NO-HIT, NO-RUN GAME

Auto Boys Come Through To Snatch A 2 to 1 Victory Over Fleetwings

HAD BATTERS WORRIED

Airplane Workers Counted Their Score in The Second

Losing his control in the final inning, Karl Leinheiser blew his chance for a no-run no-hit game as the Auto Boys came through to snatch a 2-1 victory over the Fleetwings team last evening on Leedom's field.

For the first five innings, Leinheiser had the Auto Boys batters eating out of the palm of his hands. During this stretch only one Auto Boys player had reached base, Cahall, the first batter, getting on base via an error. The next fifteen batters were retired in rotation.

But something went wrong in the sixth. Strickler worked "lamey" for a pass. Jefferies went out trying to hunt the third strike which went foul. Cahall grounded out but Heftman threw a monkey wrench into the works by slamming a single to left to score Strickler with the deadlocking run. Heftman stole second and crossed the plate on a hit to left by George Dougherty.

The airplane workers counted their score in the second when Kershaw doubled to center, went to third on a passed ball, and denied home plate when Heftman bobbled James' grounder.

Ed Jefferies who turned in his second consecutive mound victory for the Auto Boys did an excellent job in limiting the Fleetwings' batter to four hits. He would have had a shutout win had it not been for the error Heftman made in that second.

ST. ANN'S BREAKS LOSING STREAK

EDDINGTON, June 13—St. Ann's A. broke its losing streak of three straight games last evening as it defeated the cellar-dwelling Badenhausen team, 6-3, on Turner's field.

The victory also was the fifth of the season for "Mike" DeRisi and put the St. Ann's team in a deadlock with Rohm and Haas for second place. The chemical workers and the Saints are scheduled to clash tonight on the St. Ann's field.

The Wood Streeters had to fight an uphill battle to win from the boiler-makers who hopped on DeRisi for a pair of tallies in the first frame. The runs were scored with two gone and were the result of a muffed fly by Peterpaul.

A pair of errors, a pass to DeAngelo and singles by Angelini and Barbetta gave the St. Ann's three runs in the third but the Cornwells team quickly tied it up on a hit by Ludwig, a stolen base, and a single by Naylor.

Two hits by Blancosino and Angelini plus a pass and errors by Vandegrift and Munster clinched the tilt for St. Ann's, giving them three more runs in the fourth inning.

Blancosino played good ball all day for the winners while Angelini, for St. Ann's, and Ludwig, for Badenhausen, led the batters.
